- n response to the COVID-19 pandemic, many companies are implementing work-from-home arrangements for employees. While this can be an important step in keeping the business running, it can also leave you vulnerable to potential legal problems if you don't have a strong, well-thought-out work from home policy in place.

A quarter of employees

- A quarter of employees say there's a high level of toxicity in their workplace. A third of employees say it's moderately toxic, according to a Skynova survey.

What's more, HR experts and researchers say the problem with toxic workplaces isn't contained inside the company walls these days. Remote and hybrid work arrangements are just as susceptible to toxic dangers.

- Most leaders dread difficult conversations because they're uncomfortable and unpredictable in the moment.

Even worse is what can happen after the conversation. Will it irreversibly damage the relationship with a good employee? Or will it destroy a solid connection with a colleague? Or could a tough talk with the boss hurt your career?
